Seminar Overview

Complicated grief can be experienced in any bereavement but is more commonly experienced when clients are bereaved by sudden violent death such as suicide, accidents and homicide. This workshop will provide practitioners with the skills to recognise complicated grief and how to assist their clients through the grief process. The workshop will also review the role the coroner, police and court play in complicated grief.

This session will cover topics such as:

- What is complicated grief?
- Bereaved by suicide or homicide
- Understanding the role of the police, coroner and courts in sudden deaths
- The influences and risk factors of complicated grief
- How to assess complicated grief
- How to support a client experiencing complicated grief

Who is this workshop suitable for?

Counsellors, psychologists and community or health professionals who work with clients who are bereaved or experiencing much loss in their lives.

By the end of this seminar participants will:

- Have an understanding of what is complicated grief and its characteristics
- Review the factors and influences around complicated grief
- Have knowledge how to assess and work with clients with complicated grief
- How to support clients that are bereaved by suicide or homicide
