Presenter Len Unsworth was one of five recipients of the 2006 Minister’s Award for outstanding contributions to literacy.

Professor Len Unsworth, from New South Wales, is Professor in English and Multiliteracies Education at the University of New England, Armidale. As a pre-eminent figure in education he has been strongly committed to the field of literacy. He has made a major contribution to supporting teachers, students and parents understand multiple nature of literacy practices in today’s world. This has been through his work around the use of digital literacy and learning and access to new understandings about effectiveness of grammar as a resource for improving literacy and learning. Through his invaluable contribution to teacher professional development Professor Unsworth has been a catalyst for change in teacher practice and has had a lasting influence on teachers and educators in the area of literacy education.

Professor Unsworth is a prolific writer who has been highly influential in the field of literacy. His books include Teaching Children’s Literature with Information and Communication Technology, Teaching Multiliteracies Across the Curriculum and more recently e-literature for children: enhancing digital literacy learning.

Please Note: Copies of e-Literature for children and ‘Enhancing digital Literacy’ will be available for viewing at this workshop.
