

Nationally Consistent Collection of Data: School Students with Disability

Information Sessions for Principals of Independent Schools

The Federal and State Ministers for Education have agreed to the Nationally Consistent Collection of Data model on School Students with Disability (NCCD). This data collection commenced in 2013 in a phased implementation approach, with full implementation by all Australian schools in 2015.

This information session is specifically for Principals (Bursars and Learning Support Coordinators are welcome to accompany them). At the briefings we will cover the following:

- Background to the NCCD model
- Expectations of the Disability Loading under the National Plan for School Improvement
- Nationally Consistent Collection of Data Model
 - ◊ Levels of adjustment and Disability Categories
- How to decide categories and levels of adjustments
- Collecting evidence and documentation

'I encourage all schools to send a representative to this information session on Nationally Consistent Collection of Data model on School Students with Disability. This will be very relevant to the future funding of independent schools to support students with disability and to their capacity to meet the five areas of reform found in the Australian Education Bill 2012 and in particular the 'Meeting student need' area.' Valerie Gould - Executive Director of AISWA
